After spending seven years in Indianapolis, the Sunday of the Indianapolis 500 has become one of my favorite Sundays of the year. During the five years I worked for the CBS station in Indy, I would start my morning at 4 a.m., head to the TV station, pick up my web staff. From there we would meet up with a police escort to shuttle past the line of cars patiently waiting half the night for the track to open so they could get to their spot on the infield.

By 6 a.m., my digital team would have our laptops up and running ready to capture the sights and sounds of the Greatest Spectacle in Racing. Being the department head, I didn't get to enjoy much of the sights and sounds, I was relegated to watching the action from the very last row in a very large media center. In fact, most years I saw more of the race on the TV monitors than going outside to watch the race.

However, the best part of my day was the 30 minutes in the morning when I did get to leave my post and head downstairs to the media press briefing room for morning Mass, at what I affectionately called "Our Lady of the Blessed Acceleration."

Fr. Glenn O'Connor, a priest of the Archdiocese of Indianapolis, is the Catholic Chaplain for IndyCar. It is a job he has held for several decades. In addition to his role as a parish priest and chaplain, during the month of May, Father Glenn works the pits as a part-time mechanic.

On race day, he will celebrate several Masses in the Media Center for the teams, drivers and their families and members of the media.

I always found those Masses as a special time because in a place that was buzzing all around in anticipation for the day's events, for those 35 minutes everything inside that room became quiet and focused on the day's Gospel and the Eucharist.

The room would be full, 40-50 people would cram into to the space and would be a cross-section of media, crew members, track officials, drivers and their families. One year I sat across the aisle from Hélio Castroneves and his family. With all he had to focus on that day, he still made the effort to attend Mass with his family.

I think that's one of the great advantages of our Catholic faith. We can pull into most cities and find a Mass even if it's not in English. You can still go and celebrate the Eucharist, except on the last Sunday in May on the west side of Indianapolis. Due to the race and all the extra traffic, the parishes around the Speedway cancel their Sunday morning Masses.

THE RESPONSIBILITY OF OUR FAITH

Today is a day simply to ponder the fact that in baptism we were claimed by God: Father, Son, and Holy Spirit. The first reading from Deuteronomy prompts us to fix in our hearts the truth that God is the Lord of both heaven and earth and there is no other god. Saint Paul reminds us that, because we received the Spirit of adoption in baptism, we are now children of God. In the Gospel Jesus charges us with the responsibility to make other disciples. These realities make today's solemnity a day of praise, adoration, and responsibility. It is a fitting day to thank God for the absolutely free gift of faith that we were given in baptism. It is also a day to ask God for strength to take on the responsibility of sharing that faith with others.

TREASURES FROM OUR TRADITION

One of the great treasures of the Eastern tradition is the icon of the Holy Trinity created by the Russian iconographer Andrei Rublev in the 1400s. The Trinity is symbolized by the three travelers to the tent of Abraham and Sarah. They are seated at a table blessing a cup of wine, under the oak of Mamre. If you look closely, you will see a sacrificed calf in the chalice, reminding the viewer of the cross. The table, prepared for eating and tilted toward the viewer, is an invitation to the Eucharist. From left to right, each figure is keyed to a person of the Trinity. Like all icons, this image is theology in art. The persons are equal in proportion and dignity, they all carry staffs to symbolize their power, and are shown with golden wings and halos. Today, the best place to see Rublev's work is the Holy Trinity Cathedral, at the heart of the vast Holy Trinity monastery about an hour from Moscow. After decades of persecution, it is now once again a living monastery, a world heritage site, and the spiritual home of Russian Orthodoxy. A Google visit is highly recommended today!

A FAMILY PERSPECTIVE

In today's Gospel Jesus commands, "Teach them to carry out everything I have commanded you." This command is meant for every Christian. In light of this command, parenting is not only the most difficult task a person can take on, it is also one of the most apostolic and missionary tasks. Jesus commands all parents to teach their children "all that I have commanded you." ~Bud Ozar
