It was about two weeks ago when I walked into my living room and found my four year old curled up into a ball on the couch. His head was pushed in so all you could see was a tuft of hair on the top of his head sticking out. I went and sat with him, and asked him what was going on. He refused to answer me for about five minutes just shaking his head, "no", After a little more prodding and untangling his body from the pretzel he had put it in and getting him on my lap, he finally said through his little tear stained eyes, "I am just bad."

Things that break your heart.

I couldn't figure out what would have driven him to such a conclusion. There was an incident about fifteen minutes before that where he had taken something from his younger brother (which is how the survival of the fittest occurs in my home riddled with preschoolers), and I told him to give it back because it wasn't nice and to apologize. That couldn't possibly be it.

That was absolutely what it was. He figured out that he had to just a "bad" person because of one moment of indiscretion.

Again, it breaks your heart.

We talked for about ten minutes more, getting him to calm down and recognized that one bad decision is not the end of the world. I explained that I had completely already forgotten about that bad decision and all I had ever required of him was to say he was sorry to his brother, which he did. As far as I was concerned, the incident was in the past, and now we could just move on. He didn't look so convinced, but he started to perk up slightly and slowly and finally went back to playing.

It made me think about how, in this world, there are just slews of people walking around and thinking they are bad people. In reality, there is no such thing. There are bad choices, but in the entirety of time God has never created a person who was inherently bad nor will he. After all, why would He create something that was not of perfection? There are some people who compound bad choices upon bad choices which makes it more difficult to make good choices in the long run, but there still is no such thing as a bad person.

And the beauty of our bad choices, because we all make them, is that all God really requires of us is what I required of my son. To make amends, to ask for forgiveness and to try harder. Some people fear that God is keeping tabs, a laundry list if you will, of all the "bad things" that we do, but on the contrary, he forgives those moments of trial. Absolution is one of the greatest gifts given to us, because God does not want us burying ourselves out of sight—he has bigger plans. He needs us to be forgiven, to move on, and to serve his people and the Church.

Even though we are in full summer swing, don't forget to take time for reconciliation for yourself and your children. The best way to experience its beauty is to participate in it often and with purpose. No one ever has to feel like they are "bad," but instead can experience this sacrament to remind them of the love God has for them as his beautiful creation.

Pentecost (from the Greek word, pentēkostē) means fiftieth, and originates as a seven week Jewish harvest festival following the Passover Sabbath. It predates the time of Christ. Also called the Feast of Weeks, it eventually became a memorial of the covenant and of the giving of the Law. Early Christians continued a similar observance but emphasized the Resurrection. Fasting and kneeling were not allowed during this period as it was designated as a time of rejoicing. In its nascent stages, the Church celebrated the Ascension and Pentecost together as this feast of the fiftieth day evolved. In the late 4th century, Christians began to observe the feast of the Ascension on the fortieth day after Easter and, Pentecost, the outpouring of the Holy Spirit, ten days later. In the U.S. we celebrate the Ascension on the seventh Sunday of Easter and Pentecost, "the birthday of the Church," a week later.

IN BETWEEN

In between: we all find ourselves there from time to time—sometimes uncomfortably. Like in between money coming in and money going out, earning income and paying bills. In between customer and manager, diner and chef: any honest server trying to serve both. In between theory and practice, ideal and reality: everyone from parents to pastors. Ask the kids—or parishioners! This Sunday, in between Ascension and Pentecost, reminds us we're in between Jesus' departure and glorious return—sometimes uncomfortably. Though Jesus promises in Revelation, "I am coming soon," Acts shows Stephen tragically called home first. But Pope Francis urges us not to become "sourpusses," as if living Gospel love is impossible in between. Today's Gospel shows Jesus praying for those about to betray, deny, and desert him, but also praying "for those who will believe in me through their word." Us! "So that they"—we—"may all be one."

TREASURES FROM OUR TRADITION

The paschal candle, blessed at the Easter Vigil, carried in procession into the darkened church, and aflame with the light of Christ to be passed hand to hand to renew our baptism, burns for the fifty days of Easter whenever we gather as Christ's risen body. In the last fifty years, we have grown to see this candle as the sign of Christ's enduring presence with us. Before then, it was often seen more as a kind of signpost pointing backwards to events in Christ's life. Therefore, in some places, on the fortieth day after Easter, in order to portray the disappearance of Jesus at the Ascension, the candle was hidden.

Now we see the paschal candle as a sign of the great baptismal season of grace and it remains in a prominent place throughout the entire fifty days. We do know of some churches that did not hide the candle after the Ascension. In England before the Reformation, the candle was left in place for fifty days, since on Pentecost Eve there was a vigil, and the candle was used to consecrate the waters of the font. In Salisbury cathedral, the candle was thirty-six feet high, and in Westminster Abbey weighed over three hundred pounds. On Pentecost, the candles were melted to make tapers for the funerals of the poor.
